THE OVERALL SENSE OF SPACE IS ALMOST HEADY...

ILLUMINATED SHELVES ADD A WARM GLOW

For this large house in south-west London, the brief was clear: a welcoming family kitchen, blending tradition and modernity. Designers Robinson & Cornish were more than up to the challenge. The kitchen cupboards, for instance, are made from MDF with veneered ash interiors. Howard Robinson, from Robinson & Cornish, explains: 'We always give a client the choice between wood and MDF but I recommend the latter, particularly if there is an Aga, as it is the most stable material and won't warp.'

The kitchen doubles as a family room which extends into a Marston & Langer light-drenched conservatory. Appliances include a bow-fronted, soundless Fisher & Paykel double-decker dishwasher; a Sub-Zero refrigerator and a free-standing wine cooler (the freezer drawers are tucked away, hidden within the kitchen design). The cupboards above the sink have etched glass doors, brushed stainless steel handles add a contemporary touch and work surfaces are topped with honed black granite. A plate rack over the sink has a stainless steel tray underneath that directs water drips to a specific point over the left-hand bowl, avoiding water splashes on work surfaces and taps. Illuminated shelves add a warm glow. This family kitchen is the spiritual heart of the home – a living, working space, custom-made to the last detail. □
